Dear Dick:

Referring to the attached letters, I would hope that this meets with your approval, and if it does, I would appreciate being "schooled" just before the date of my lecture to be brought up to date.

Warmest personal regards and continuing best wishes.

Sincerely,

"Red"

Dear "Chick":

I was honored and delighted to receive your kind invitation to address the Sea Power and National Strategy Study at 1100 Wednesday, October 12, 1966, on the subject of "The United States National Intelligence System".

If I may, I would like to bring Mildred and my golf clubs!

Warmest best wishes to you and that sweet girl who still puts up with you.

Sincerely,

W. F. Raborn

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

AUG 12 1966

Dear Red:

As you know, during the first term at the Naval War College, we conduct a Sea Power and National Strategy Study. I would be most appreciative if you could return to our platform to deliver an address entitled "The United States National Intelligence System" at 1100 on Wednesday, 12 October 1966. If you can accept, you may find the enclosed lecture information helpful during the preparation of your address.

Your audience would consist of the faculty and students of our School of Naval Warfare and Naval Command and Staff, numbering about four hundred, and including senior officers from all U. S. military services plus a few civilians representing various governmental agencies. All in the audience would be U. S. nationals, cleared to receive TOP SECRET security information.

I hope you will be able to accept our invitation this year, for I am looking forward to the pleasant prospect of welcoming you back to our platform in October.

Sincerely,

"Chick"

P.S. Please come!

LECTURE INFORMATION

Lecture Title: "The U. S. National Intelligence System"

Scope: A discussion of the role of the intelligence community in the formulation and implementation of national strategy and a comparative evaluation of the capabilities of the United States' and the USSR's intelligence systems on a world wide basis.

Relationship to Curriculum:

This lecture is in support of a study of the United States. The study is designed to provide the student with an understanding of U. S. goals and principles, and of the factors and procedures involved in the formulation and implementation of U. S. national strategy. The roles and functions of the principal departments and agencies involved in policy formulation are studied to gain an understanding of the contributions of each, the conflicts which may arise, the coordination which is necessary, and the effects of non-governmental factors.

Preceding parts of the curriculum have reviewed the U. S. organization for national security, historic and contemporary strategic concepts, the theory and practice of international relations, international law, and counterinsurgency.

Specific Areas of Interest:

- a. A discussion and analysis of the U. S. intelligence community, its capabilities, roles, effectiveness and coordination methods.
- b. A comparative discussion of the overt and covert methods utilized for intelligence collection by the United States and its communist adversaries.
- c. A personal assessment of the significance and value of intelligence to national security planning.
